POSITIVE EXPOSURE creates a more inclusive world for individuals and communities at risk of stigma and exclusion through photography, film, community storytelling, educational programs, and advocacy.

Founded over 25 years ago in New York City by photographer Rick Guidotti, Positive Exposure has transformed into a global movement, leveraging photography, film, and storytelling to celebrate the beauty and richness of human diversity.

OUR PROGRAMS

FRAME

FRAME is a web-based film library of short documentaries that offer a more humanized understanding of medical conditions and critical health topics. FRAME is a valuable resource for healthcare providers in training, clinicians, families, and communities.

the PEARLS project

PEARLS is a blog platform where individuals from around the world share their stories and allow audiences to experience life from their unique perspectives. The Ambassadors offer us reimagined ways to empathize, understand, and look beyond difference.

textbookBEAUTY

Vibrant and life-affirming photographs are offered to health care providers in training and faculty to utilize as an alternative to the grim, dehumanizing images often found in medical education.

The Positive Exposure Gallery

The gallery located on NYC's Museum Mile in East Harlem is a central hub showcasing visual, performing, multisensory, and literary artists as well as providing educational, cultural, artist-in-residency programming, student internships, and advocacy training.

Lectures, Keynotes, and Workshops

Positive Exposure provides lectures, keynotes, grand rounds, and workshops to hospital systems, medical schools, educational institutions, advocacy groups, corporations, and conferences internationally.

Photography and Film Shoots

Positive Exposure empowers individuals and families to embrace their distinctive strengths and beauty through photography, film, and storytelling.

Exhibitions - Near and Far

The work of Positive Exposure is featured in galleries, museums, hospitals, civic centers, and public spaces around the globe.

Customized Programming

Positive Exposure welcomes the opportunity to develop new partnerships and customized programs, including photography, film, and educational initiatives.
